

Companies generally violate the Washington Consumer Protection Act if they injure your property (e.g., cause you to lose money) through an unfair business act or practice that might interest other consumers, too. There are also a multitude of statutes and regulations which limit specific business conduct. However, companies can get away with unfair business practices unless consumers stand up for their rights.

Sound Justice Law Group represents consumers who seek to assert their rights against unfair or otherwise illegal business acts and practices. If you have been injured by unfair or otherwise illegal business conduct, contact Sound Justice to schedule a consultation with an attorney.
